Avista to host public meetings about 2027 Electric and Natural Gas Integrated Resource Plan

November 18, 2026

Customers are invited to give feedback on plan for meeting future electric and natural gas demand

SPOKANE, Wash. November 18, 2026: Avista is hosting two virtual public meetings on Wednesday, December 2, to gather public feedback on its electric and natural gas integrated resource plans (IRP).

Avista's electric and natural gas IRPs look at the next 20 years to determine how much electricity and natural gas will be needed and where those resources could come from while balancing reliability, cost and environmental sustainability. Public input is integral to the process, and feedback from customers and interested parties helps shape the final plans, which are submitted to utility commissions in each state Avista serves.

The public meeting will begin with a presentation on each plan and conclude with an opportunity for audience questions. Participants will have the chance to hear about a variety of topic areas related to the IRP and provide direct feedback.

More information about the IRP and the links to register for the meeting can be found at www.myavista.com/about-us/integrated-resource-planning.
