Washington

- Filed a general rate case Feb. 9, 2015 designed to increase electric base revenues by $33.2 million and natural gas base revenues by $12.0 million
- Based on 48% equity ratio and 9.9% return on equity
- The Washington Utilities and Transportation Commission has up to 11 months to review

Oregon

- February 23, the Oregon Commission rejected our all-party settlement agreement due to concerns over three primary issues: the temporary revenue credit to customers, rate spread among customer classes and customer count tracking mechanism.
- The Oregon Commission encouraged the parties to work together to address these issues. We don't expect the delay to have a material impact on 2015 earnings guidance

- We are currently evaluating the need to file general rate cases in Idaho and Alaska

Alaska Electric Light & Power Company (AEL&P)

Guidance Assumptions

- Our outlook for Avista Utilities and AEL&P assumes, among other variables, normal precipitation, temperatures and hydroelectric generation for the remainder of the year. Our outlook for Avista Utilities also includes the expected impact from decoupling in Washington.
- Our guidance range for Avista Utilities encompasses expected variability in power supply costs and the application of the ERM to that power supply cost variability.
- The midpoint of our guidance range for Avista Utilities does not include any benefit or expense under the ERM. In 2015, we expect to be in a benefit position under the ERM within the 90% customer/10% company sharing band, which is expected to add 5 to 6 cents per share to Avista Utilities' earnings.
- Our earnings guidance range previously assumed we would repurchase 4 million shares of common stock through our 2014 stock repurchase program by the end of 2014. By not fully completing this stock repurchase program and in turn not issuing any common stock during 2015 other than those under employee plans, we expect earnings dilution of approximately 3 cents per share in 2015.

Attractive and growing dividend

Dividend growth expected to keep pace with long-term earnings growth

*Current quarterly dividend of $0.33 annualized

Prudent balance sheet and liquidity

$262.4 million of available liquidity at Avista Corp. as of Dec. 31, 2014

- Jan. 2, 2015, we initiated a stock repurchase program for up to 800,000 shares that continues through Mar. 31, 2015. Through Jan. 31, 2015, we have not repurchased any shares under this program.
- In 2015, we expect to issue approximately $125 million of long-term debt at Avista Corp.

No significant maturities until 2018

An attractive investment

 - Selective acquisition of AEL&P
